++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Turning wet and windy in the northwest tonight. Dry elsewhere.

This Evening and Tonight:
A clear dry start but cloud soon spilling south across most of the country with some rain later in the night for the northwest. Strengthening winds overnight too with coastal gales possible by dawn in the northwest.

Tuesday:
Rain in the far northwest will spread east, turning heavy for a short time. Brighter but fresher conditions to follow for the afternoon with showers in west. Coastal gales.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Blustery showers on Wednesday, drier in the east and feeling cold. Milder on Thursday and Friday but more cloud and persistent rain at times for the northwest areas. Windy throughout.
